■ New models at Matzel Development's Covington Village in Ocean County get great reviews from visitors.

Modular homes available through Zarrilli Homes are constructed in a climate-controlled facility.

Zarrilli Homes hosts factory tour

Zarrilli Homes recently sponsored an escorted factory tour at Westchester Modular Homes in Wingdale, N.Y., where guests saw firsthand how modular homes are built.

The guided factory tour at Westchester Modular Homes is a unique experience where home buyers can learn how a new home is custom designed and observe an actual modular home under construction at each phase.

Anthony Zarrilli, founder of Zarrilli Homes, advises his clients not to buy a modular home before seeing how it is constructed. "For most families, the purchase of a new home is the biggest investment they will make," he said.

Three new models make big impact

Matzel Development recently revealed three new models at Covington Village, the Ocean County 55+ lifestyle community. The Ashford, Benton and Chelsea models were previewed over a period of three weeks and have received rave reviews from visitors, according to Marge Karahuta, vice president of sales and marketing for Matzel Development.

"People who visited our new models were blown away by the amount of space these condominiums offer," Karahuta said. "They also loved the gourmet kitchens, bright, sun-filled interiors and private balconies."

In addition to these favorite features, the new models include a variety of upscale amenities and flexible floor plans.

The Ashford, priced from $157,500, includes one spacious master suite, ideal for a single person or a couple.
